03.38 New York City. There was another anthrax incident in New York City today, in the New York City office of New York Governor Pataki. SB; George Pataki, New York Governor, says that one of tests came back positive for anthrax being present. Health officials suggested Pataki and his staff take Cipro. Officials say that anthrax spores were found in the ventilation system of the NBC office. NBC says that no one else has tested for anthrax. I; Dr. Stephen Ostroff, Centers for Disease Control, says that the anthrax does not die, it just does not get stirred up enough once settled to pose a threat. SB; Tom Brokaw, NBC, says the FBI and Health Officials tried to discourage his assistant and her husband from thinking they had anthrax. The Anthrax tests at ABC are still not complete. 01.16 TZ; Anthrax Scares. The House of Representatives will be closed tomorrow because of an anthrax scare. The Senate will be in session, but most staff will not be working and most offices will be closed. The Centers for Disease Control has reported that the anthrax spores found in Florida appears to match the strain of the anthrax in New York. SI; Tommy Thompson, Secretary of Health and Human Services, says David Flemming of the CDC has made this finding of the matching strains. Thompson says Flemming also said the anthrax in New York, Florida, and Washington were sensitive to antibiotics and can be treated with Cipro, Penicillin, and Dioxycyclin(?). Thompson says there has to be some sort of connection for the matching anthrax spores but it may not come from the same individual or groups, and the FBI will determine that. V; Capitol Building. V; Scenes from a Senate Hearing with Tommy Thompson. V; Clip from "Good Morning America", from ABC News. SB; Linda Douglass, ABC News, Capitol Hill, says they are being told that about 20 members of Tom Daschle's staff have tested positive for anthrax. PC; Dennis Hastert, Speaker of the House, says anthrax was in the ventilation system and found in the mail-room in the Senate. I; Chris Shays, says the Speaker has said a few dozen of Daschle's staff has contracted anthrax. I; Rep. Constance Morella, Maryland, says everyone was quite when anthrax was mentioned. SB; Sen. Joseph Lieberman, Connecticut, says they have just received a request from Sen. Daschle to recess this hearing. PC; Sen. Tom Daschle, says in the Hart office building, 31 people have had positive nasal swabs. Morella says they will no longer take things for granted. Daschle says the Senate will not shut down. PC; Dennis Hastert, Speaker of the House, says they will close their offices. I; Rep. J.C. Watts Jr., Oklahoma, says there is a difference in being symbolic compared to stupid. Shays says they should go building by building. V; Clip from MSNBC News. SB; Rep. Paul Wellstone, Minnesota, says they need more clarity from the Administration about how they are going to get the food to the people in Afghanistan. I; Jerri Clayton, Tourist, says it is amazing how accessible the Capitol is even after these events. John Donovan reporting from Washington. 12.58

00.50 TZ; Important Clue in Anthrax. > 7 people in the country now have anthrax and are being treated for it. GR; United States Map; Anthrax; New York, cases: 3, exposure: 3; New Jersey, cases: 2; Wash., DC, exposures: 31; Florida, cases: 3, exposures: 6. Anthrax has now turned up at all 3 of the major television networks today it was CBS. > Anthrax showed up at CBS and to the assistant to anchorman Dan Rather, according to CBS News president Andrew Hayward. PC; Andrew Hayward, CBS News president, says there was a little irritation on the assistance's skin, she was tested and the test came back positive. No one at CBS recalled a threatening letter or any tell-tale powder. PC; Dan Rather, CBS News anchor, says that the facts sort of shout that someone did not wish them well. V; NYPD and FDNY at CBS newsroom. PC; Dr. Stephen Ostroff, Centers for Disease Control, says that the risk currently in the building is essentially negligible. > The second set of anthrax cases announced today involved two New Jersey postal workers. V; Postal truck. One at the main mail sorting facility in Trenton, New Jersey. V; Mail sorting facility in Trenton, New Jersey. The other was involving a female letter carrier in the West Trenton area. PC; Eddy Bresnitz, New Jersey Asst. Commissioner of Health, says the test were positive and both individuals were notified and they are doing well. The route of the female letter carrier and the mailboxes she serves in a residential area along the Delaware River are now important leads as to where the anthrax letters may have actually originated. Brian Ross, reporting. > The government is offering a big reward in urgency of finding out of who is doing it. PC; unknown man, says they are the FBI are offering a reward up to $1 million. Anthrax mixed in powder form is extremely portable, easily concealed, and it is hard to trace its origins. I; Kyle Olson, consultant, says a person can just about bring it in, in any way, shape, or form, and it is still going to be good for them. V; secret laboratory in Nevada. V; copy of envelope addressed to Tom Brokaw. As of now investigators disagree on whether the writer is from the U.S. or abroad. Sources say the analysis is slow on handwriting and ink testing, for Daschle's letter because it is so contaminated with anthrax and still a health risk. V; United States Postal Office, Washington D.C. The U.S. Postal service will look for a fluorescent mark on the envelopes. Placed there when the envelopes were postmarked. PC: Tony Esposito, postal inspector, says it will tell them what time the article of mail was processed, what machine processed it, and on what day it was processed. The FBI is also looking at hospitals in the New Jersey area, to see if anyone went for treatment before the outbreaks, possibly linking them to those sending the anthrax. Pierre Thomas, reporting. > The House of Representatives was closed, with no business being done. The Senate did some business, there were areas off limits. 31 people tested positive for anthrax exposure, there were no more today. Because the congress represents so much to the country and the the world, symbolically there were some incriminations today but closing part of it down. Senators worked out of their homes, or met in the so called hide-away offices of certain senior senators and the capitol. V; videos of various Senate meetings. The judiciary committee squeezed into a makeshift hearing room to argue about Bush's nominees for judge shifts. I; Sen. Olympia Snowe, (R) Maine, says that they want to position themselves as examples of strengths. V; cover of "New York Post". PC; Rep. Richard Gephardt, Minority Leader, says what kind of message would it send to the terrorists, if they stupidly put people back in harms way to be infected by anthrax. PC; Robert Gibbs, Defense Advanced Research Project Agency, says that he does not know why the house closed down today. The Defense Department said that there was enough anthrax in the Daschle letter to infect all of the 2000 people who worked in the Senate office building, if it was dispersed. Linda Douglass, reporting. > GR; Vital Information For Every Family. Primetime Thursday. 07.11

02.59 TZ; Postal Workers. The Mayor of Washington said that the 2 postal employees that died, died of anthrax. Thousands are being given antibiotics, and health officials admit that their understanding of anthrax is changing. The Head of the Centers For Disease Control said that anthrax can be spread more easily than once thought. SB; Jeffrey Koplan, Director of Center for Disease Control and Prevention, says that closed envelopes can transmit as well. SB; Ivan Walks, Director DC Department of Health, says they do not need to do further testing, but they need to treat. SB; Tommy Thompson, Secretary of Health and Human Services, says they are going to act fast. Lisa Stark reporting. 05.00

05.01 TZ; Health Officials. There are serious questions being raised about the conduct of the Centers For Disease Control and the Postal Service. A Post Office in Florida found out that an anthrax letter could infect a post office, 8 days ago. There was still no effort to check area post offices after the letter to Senator Tom Daschle. I; Dr. David Fleming, Deputy Director Centers For Disease Control, says once they realized that the rules had changed, they moved as fast as they could. I; Judy Johnson, American Postal Workers Union, says she thinks that the animals should be tested to, but the postal workers are not any less of a being. I; Mayor Glen Gilmore, Hamilton Township, New Jersey, says the Postal Service should have said that they would test the workers because they showed up to work even when they knew they were at risk. 07.28

19.33 TZ; Closer Look The Centers For Disease Control was formed in 1946, and plays a major role in protecting the public from the most widespread, deadly, and mysterious threats. The CDC has never been under this much pressure. The CDC has mainly dealt with natural occurrences, such as food poisoning of the West Nile Virus, and it has never had to deal with bio-terrorist attacks. The way the CDC is responding is raising questions. SB; Tom Harkin, Iowa Senator, says it seems like something is broken down. The CDC admits that it is being stretched. Jeffrey Koplan, Centers For Disease Control, communications capabilities are strained. The CDC labs must operate around the clock. I; Dr. Stephen Baum, NY Society of Infectious Diseases, says a typical outbreak involved fewer than 100 people in one location, this involves thousands of people in many locations. SB; Dr. Allan Rosenfield, Columbia University School of Public Health, says communications could be better but dealing with the spread of anthrax was not part of anyone's training. 06.00 More Anthrax Cases. > 2 more anthrax cases have come to light in New Jersey. 1 is a postal worker with inhalation anthrax; the other, a woman who isn't connected to the postal service with a skin infection. Meanwhile, a union in New York has filed suit to shut down the largest mail processing center. Absenteeism has been nearly 30% since spores have been found in sorting machines. > Federal health officials are trying to reassure Americans that the mail is safe. Some people have taped shut mail slots to keep mail from being inserted through their front doors. PC; Dr. Pat Meehan (?), of the Centers for Disease Control, says that people in Washington who receive mail are "essentially at no risk of" inhalation anthrax. There is a "remote possibility" that a letter could have a few spores, and people who get them could be at a small risk of cutaneous anthrax. Mail that passes through a contaminated sorting machine could pick up some spores. Howard Aronstein (?) reporting. 07.03

[Derived from Captioning] 49.06 Vv)yyw while the white house has warned that there may still be anthrax in the mail, a new type of drug instead of cipro is being distributed to postal workers who are potentially at risk. In atlanta, dr. Stephen ostroff is a senior epidemiologist for the national centers for disease control. Hi, doctor. Hi. Why the switch. It isn't necessarily a switch. What you have to understand for many infectious diseases there may only be in terms of antibiotic to take, but in this situation with anthrax, we have a number of alternatives that are equally effective in terms of their ability to both prevent as well as treat the disease. And if you look at recommendations that date back well before october 4th from a year ago and two years ago they've consistently said that there are a number of alternatives which are equally effective and those two alternatives, one of them is cipro and the other one is a drug by the name of doxycycline, both of them are just as easy to take. There are some people that tolerate one and don't tolerate the other, but bot of them have been distributed right from the very beginning. As this progresses, could we see even more alternatives used besides doxycycline and cipro? Well, those are the two that we have by far the most experience with. 50.19

You have to realize that this this event is affecting not only us but for many of the involved agencies. What we understand today is vastly different from what we understood a week ago and different from what we understood two weeks ago. From the very beginning we have been acting on the best information that we had available at the time and that's what we continue to do. In the ongoing investigation, is it realistic to think you'll find the source of origin? Well, the role of the cdc has been the public health aspects of this situation making sure that we do our utmost to both determine what the source is and who is in risk will it be found? Will it be identified? Well, i certainly hope that eventually the law enforcement authorities will be able to identify who has been doing this. All right, dr. Ostroff, thank you. Thank you. [Derived from Captioning] 01.37 For example he said investigators are at risk of being to undereqpos underexposer decontamination laboratory workers basically said it we can't put these people on antibiotics, forever, that would not be a desirable thing to do instead he said they plan he couldn't give a time line but sound like would it be happening soon, to vaccinate these people, in lieu of keeping them on antibiotics forever. He also said that there is a tax tax force looking into whether certain postal workers should be receiving the vaccine, and other groups, and that is his word and wouldn't define who those other groups might be. But basically what they were saying to me was, we are seeing now that there are certain groups, who are at a very high risk, for being in contact with this anthrax for the anthrax bacteria, and it is simply not desirable to have someone on antibiotics, all the time. It is not desirable for that person also not desirable for community because it can lead to antibiotic resistance in the community, so instead, planning on administering vaccine the pentagon owns all of the vaccine and a spokesman for pentagon, has told me, that they have administered vaccine to half a million troops over years plan finishing up with everyone, wolf? Cnn medical correspondent elizabeth cohen joins me from atlanta with more on who is getting stuck. Elizabeth, who has high-liveg high-risk job. High-risk job anybody handling trax on regular basis. We're talking about people who were in labs or in the investigation. I berned this today whenist at the cdc interviewing doctor david fleming. The real use for anthrax is not in post expoer exposure setting by the preexposure setting for a small number of people. If the people in a situation of having continuous exposure to anthrax as a result of the attacks. So laboratory workers, who are in a position of handling the environmental specimens investigators and in the field moving from site to site. People experts in decontamination. In other words doctor fleming say anthrax situation could go on for a while. And it would be medically unwise to have people on antibiotics for months and months. Cdc says won't vaccinate for at least two weeks. They said think about vaccinateing postal workers and other people who are at high risk and make that decision in the next two weeks. Greta. [Derived from Captioning] 04.39 We'll probably back to you later on this afternoon. The president has been conducting a 24-hour war on terrorism, not just with our troops located in Afghanistan and with the eyes of this country toward Afghanistan, but it's been a 24-hour a day war on terrorism here in the United States. And there have been so many elements and so many agencies that have been involved in this process and what we intend to do in the days and weeks ahead are to bring some of these major players to this briefing room from time to time on a regular basis to deal with the questions that you might have. As I said before, as we continue our round-the-clock war on terrorism at home, we think it's very approach down to bring some of these principals together on a regular basis to respond to questions that you might have and obviously some questions that people in America have as well. Today, joining me from the department of health and human services is my friend and former colleague Tommy Tomp Sob and he is joined by Dr. Pat Meehan, the director of emergency environmental services with the Centers for Disease Control and I've asked them to give you an update this morning. Gentlemen? Thank you very much, Tom and good morning to all of the reporters here. I would like to briefly update you on the health and human services and the currently the department of health and human services has 575 individuals in the field responding to acts of threats of bioterrorism. 06.17

And we also have reached an agreement with all those individuals dealing with the flu vaccine and they will be delivered on time and we will have an increased amount of about 5 million doses. So we'll have 85 million doses of vaccine for flu that will be sent out to the clinics and to the hospitals in the months of November and hopefully all will be sent by the first week in December. In regard to the most recent update on anthrax, the Cohen Building has been presumptably positively tested for anthrax this past couple of days and all the individuals in the mail room are on antibiotics and we are letting all the individuals know, the mail rooms have been closed down. But presumptive positive means that the next environmental testing will now go to the CDC labs in Atlanta and that conclusion of that information will be sent back within the next 24 to 48 hours. That, I'd introduce pat meehan. Good morning. Almost afternoon. As of this morning we have 12 confirmed cases of anthrax. Dr. Meehan? Thank you, Governor, good morning, ladies and gentlemen. Although there have been unfortunately been new cases reported from the New York and New Jersey area, the good news is that in the Washington, D.C. Area there are no new reported suspect or confirmed cases, and as the Governor reported, we put on antibiotic prophylaxis several thousand postal workers who work in the Brentwood facility in post offices that received mail directly from Brentwood, and we are in the process of working with the postal service to complete our evaluation of those post offices in the D.C. Area that received mail directly from the Brentwood facility. Thank you. Yes? Can I just ask you more about the alert and let me if I can give you to slice out part of this, without giving away sources and methods and anything else. Can you tell us what kind of information that is out there, the sphere that it came from and what's different from the daily noise that comes across your desk about this particular threat? You correctly point out that there is quite a bit of intelligence information that comes across the desk every morning. Yesterday's announcement was occasioned by a decibel level was louder and there were more sources. 54.11

[Derived from Captioning] 37.24 What don't they know? All of the above, almost. For one thing, they don't understand how the small amounts of anthrax bacteria that appear to have been contained in the letters that we have been able to establish existed, how those could possibly have been in sufficient abundance to contaminated and infected as many people as possible. It does leave open this question of "wasn't there some other mail?" Also, frankly, people are overwhelmingly surprised with the degree of the infection once it's established in people. As was said in our piece, the woman in new york is very, very seriously ill. People are not able to explain how somebody who probably inhaled only a tiny amount became so seriously ill so quickly. How many spores are necessary to infect somebody now is a major question. Ifill: that's exactly the point. When we hear about hot spots or we hear about trace amounts found or spores found in various buildings around washington and in new jersey especially, how do we know how significant that is? Can people go back to work, for instance, at the state department where they say there probably are spores everywhere, but no infections? As jeffrey koplman from the C.D.C. 38.34
