

Jennifer L. Keller
Communications Specialist
U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Jennifer L. Keller has worked with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on air-quality issues since 1992. Prior to 2003 she was Team Leader for indoor air quality in schools, addressing such issues as mold, asthma, and mobile sources on school grounds. In 2003 she joined EPA's Clean School Bus USA initiative as a communications specialist.

Prior to joining EPA, she worked for 4 years as a Country Desk Officer for four Latin American countries at the Peace Corps. She served in Costa Rica from 1985-1987 as a Peace Corps Volunteer, setting up literacy programs for adults.

She has a Bachelor's degree in Communication Studies from Northwestern University and a Master's of International Management degree from the University of Maryland.